After making it through Chinese censorship and several weeks at sea, The Chinese Dream will finally arrive in the Netherlands this week. Also in this issue, the surprising transformation of a former warehouse and other tips.

NEW: JOBSVEEM

In the past, when work dried up at the Lloydpier in Rotterdam and warehouses fell into disuse, people were quick to call for their demolition. But these days, opinions have changed. The dark, dilapidated Jobsveem warehouse has been transformed into an open, well-lit building with office space and first-class apartments. Read more about this turbulent history and metamorphosis in the book Jobsveem Rotterdam, published last week.

* Jobsveem Rotterdam. Een gebouw in beweging 1912-2008
Paul Groenendijk / Dutch / ISBN 978 90 6450 677 2 / euro 34.50

What if you built the whole mass of Western Europe within a period of 20 years? What if 400 million farmers then moved in? What would it look like? How would it work? The Chinese government plans to build an astounding 400 new cities for millions of farmers who now live in rural communities. Find out about this building frenzy and much more in the 800-plus page book The Chinese Dream: A Society under Construction.

DCF, Neville Mars en Adrian Hornsby / English & Chinese / ISBN 978 90 6450 652 9 / euro 49.50
